In every case, too, in which nurses and other attendants were employed, they were engaged upon the cheapest terms upon which their services could be obtained, it having been a ruling principle with me to render the expenditure as little onerous as possible, consistently with the effectual attainment of the great object of the charity. The whole number of individuals, to whom relief was administered in this way, was seventeen, and the whole amount expended, one hundred and ninety-seven dollars, twenty-five cents. But whilst relief was extended in this manner to afflicted individuals or families, in different and generally distant parts of the city, I could not but feel that this mode of operation was highly unsatisfactory, if not wholly ineffectual, not only from the fact that cases were seldom brought to my notice till they were past recovery, but also from the difficulty of procuring nurses and other attendants in sufficient time, and particularly from my inability to ascertain whether the engagements of the persons employed were faithfully performed, or whether the pecuniary donations were strictly applied to those for whose benefit they were intended. Under those circumstances, it occurred to me that the laudable and...
