One name to-night is in every heart and upon every lip, and that name belongs in a certain special sense to you. It belongs to you because your orginization is based upon the ideas, the hope and the faith that were in him. It belongs to you as the lighthouse does to the mariner who steers his bark by its steadfast ray. Whatever sad and heroic memories cluster around his great career, something of their glory, some breath of their fragrance, rests upon all who strive to make the United States of America such a nation as Abraham Lincoln strove to make it. I bid you, therefore, good cheer, Mr. President, and salute you and your club with the old-time greeting of an old-time Republican. Carlyle was not far from right in adoring heroes; and he was more than right in seeing that heroes do not, of necessity, wear plumes and sabers. It is the meek, and not the mighty, who are promised the inheritance of the earth. Luther was a greater conquerer than Von Moltke, and Victor Hugo in exile was assuredly a nobler figure than the Third Napoleon at Solferino. Ideal characters cannot be made to order. They must stand for something more than accident, for something better than titles and dignities. All our great American names are connected in some way with the idea of nationality, of growth,...
