Excerpt: . . . SERMON I. THE INTERMEDIATE STATE: OR, THE CONDITION OF THE DEAD BETWEEN THEIR DEATH AND THEIR RESURRECTION. preached In A Course In The Church Of The Good Shepherd. Hartford; And Afterwards In Two Parts, As An Alisaints-day Sermon In Trinity Church. Acts li. 34, 35. For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself. The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool. Acts Xxiii. 8. The Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit. We stand close at the Festival of All Saints, a day which calls upon us to think lovingly and reverently of those who have departed this life in the true faith or Christs holy Name, and of the yet unbroken bond linking us to them. The Communion of which we shall on that day partake will be, let us remember, a real and living communion with them. Therefore I have chosen for our meditation to-day a subject intimately connected with the nature of that near Feast, namely, the Intermediate State. The unusuall length of the sermon I makes it desirable that I should give only the first part of it this morning, reserving the conclusion for this evenings service. There are some events which never lose their solemnity, though they become things of common occurrence. This is especially true of death. Though hundreds of generations have appeared upon earth, and done their work,...
