Excerpt: . . . center depends upon entertainment profits for its support or not, there is often occasion for giving a social function for the indirect purpose of accumulating a sum of money. Always popular in the country is the box social, at which boxes of dainties prepared by the women and girls are auctioned off to the men and boys and are sold at fixed prices. The names of the original owners are concealed inside. When the boxes are opened the purchasers find the owners and each sits down to supper with his partner. There is the parcel auction, to which many parcels of various sorts are brought, containing anything from a pound of salt to an old coat. Cake and candy sales, movies and entertainment with an admission fee, and an outdoor circus with human animals and with side shows in charge of various committees are...
