Excerpt: . . . called their attention to the good thing in that tree, and volleys, instead of single bullets, would have come my way. I dont blame the fellow, though. He was attending to what he considered his business, and attending to it well until I interfered by getting out of his reach. I was in a very good imitation of service clothes, had a cartridge-belt and revolver strapped to my waist, and he undoubtedly mistook me for an officer making a reconnoissance. Wriggling a little way from the tree, I made myself as comfortable as I could in the long grass behind a bush. But here I could see nothing except at intervals, and then what I could see did not satisfy me. It was while lying here now thalt I beca-me aware of a curious possibility on the battlefield. In the hottest fire, one may...
